

LIZZIE. IN THE SITTING ROOM. WITH A HATCHET.

It's a real-life game of Clue when you visit Lizzie Borden Bed and Breakfast and listen to the well-informed tour guides show you around the house where Mr. and Mrs. Borden were found bludgeoned to death on a steamy August day in 1892. The guides provide you with the evidence; you form your own conclusions.

It's a popular spot. Several thousand people each year take the tour of the Borden home. Only a few hundred are brave enough to stay here overnight. Overnight visitors get a longer tour and the privilege of saying they spent the night at a home where one of the nation's most infamous murders took place. The very bravest stay in the John Morse room where Abby Borden was discovered in a pool of blood.

To Keefe's surprise, she said, "Oh, I don't stay here!" The only guests at the house that night, they settled in to the Borden sisters' rooms and lived to tell the tale. Their overnight was not without incident. In the middle of that winter night, the heat stopped working.

Stay here if you dare.
